STUDENT AFFAIRS ASSISTANT DEAN

LaDoris Hazzard Cordell is assistant dean for student affairs at Stanford University Law School in Stanford, Calif. Acting as recruitment officer for the school, she is responsible for boosting the minority enrollment there. During her two years as assistant dean, Stanford's Law School has become the leader in the nation in its enrollment of minority students. Mrs. Cordell also acts as the administrative liaison between Stanford's Law School and law student organizations, in addition to counseling law students on career choices and their personal problems. While participating in various civic and legal organizations, she still finds time to practice law in East Palo Alto, Calif.
