East P.A. senior marks 107th year

Clem Campbell, East Palo Alto's durable centenarian, reached the 107-year-old mark today, and planned to celebrate it in his usual fashion.

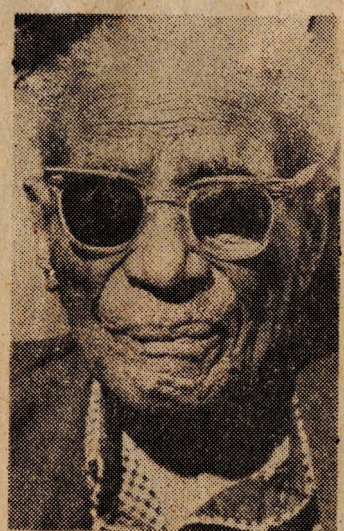

Campbell was scheduled to be feted by his relatives in a party at the Berkeley home of his son, William Campbell.

If only relatives are invited the party still should be huge. Campbell has seven living children, 61 grandchildren, 35 great-great grandchildren, and 20 great-great-great grandchildren, his daughter, Margie Ross, estimated.

Campbell lives with his daughter at 2262 Poplar Ave. in East Palo Alto.

He is a native of Cuero, Tex., and was a chicken and hog farmer until he retired at age 65.

Now his favorite activity is talking to his visitors, especially offering advice founded in many years of experience to the younger members of his family.

Relatives from as far away as Los Angeles and Seattle are expected for the party.
